Manual program: Connection: Serial.Richmond Football Club player Daniel Rioli will miss at least the first two weeks of the season after colliding with an opponent during an intra-club game. The 18-year-old sustained a fractured collarbone after a collision with the player's hand in the second quarter of Saturday's loss to Fremantle at Optus Stadium. Rioli was initially taken from the ground on a stretcher but was later examined by a doctor before being declared able to return to training. "Any time you hear of a player having a fracture, you know it's a pretty serious injury," Richmond Football Club president Brendon Gale told radio station SEN. "We're going to work through that a bit over the next few days." The recovery period for the injury will take at least two weeks. "I believe that Daniel will play again," Gale said. "He's got a pretty swift road to recovery and we're pretty confident that he will be able to play in the VFL. "I don't see any reason why he shouldn't be cleared to return to the playing field in two weeks." Rioli was taken from the ground on a stretcher but was later examined by a doctor. With Rioli out for the season, the Tigers will need to look elsewhere to add depth to their forward line. Tigers' depth in defence: which player could step up? Forward Jacob Townsend is one player who could take his opportunity to play forward, while the club has high hopes that Jacob Hopper will be able to return from a hamstring injury early in the season. The Tigers have also included Scott Lycett in their VFL side. The final month of the home and away 3e3371323
