This leaves me with two possible conclusions: Someone is trying to be deliberately obscure in their use of the text or Someone was deliberately trying to show that while the program was running, they were typing what they thought was a word, and it ended up with an unusual but clearly readable character. So, if you want to determine which, I'd suggest searching for "thief simulator" on Google and comparing the results to the "thief simulator" YouTube video, and making a note of the on-screen time for each. Since I don't have access to a Windows system, it's possible that someone could run a similar program on a Linux system and check their log files to see if they log any text that occurs during the time the program is running.
