Features: Compatibility: Supported OS: Microsoft Windows 10, 8, 7, Vista SP2, XP SP3 and XP SP2 Pros: Easily creates backups of user profiles and auto backs up network settings and mappings to different folder locations. Allows the user to create a data archive file that can be downloaded to a fresh computer on which you are trying to install Transwiz. The wizard-like interface features a simple and intuitive design which makes it a breeze to navigate. The application comes with additional tools to transform your user profile into different formats and is able to launch scripts on your computer that facilitate your installation of the program and organize your profiles with ease. The free trial version of the software works fine and enables you to create a backup folder on the targeted location of your choice.

Transwiz Cons: The single-click backup to a single folder type is quite limited and doesn't allow you to transfer multiple profiles per folder or to create multiple folders with users on different computers included in the same domain. Single-click file backup is not able to encrypt the files. You can't export data and settings or drag and drop files and folders from one location to another. Have you tried to transfer a user profile to another computer on which you have decided to install the software? Or perhaps you tried to migrate the user profile from one computer to another in the same workstation. Well, there is a problem. If you transfer your user profile data to a new machine, you won't be able to obtain all your settings and configurations you have previously used. And that is what happens when you transfer your user profile data to another computer in the same place, while it's considered an ideal transfer scenario. The issue is that when you move data, you are wiping out the network settings, devices and other settings that are transferred from one machine to another. You need to find a way to migrate a profile, or multiple profiles, to a freshly installed computer. How? With Transwiz, of course! With this application, you can directly transfer your data and settings from one computer to another or multiple computers with ease. Transwiz offers a simple wizard-style user interface that allows you to easily transfer your data from one machine to another, or multiple machines. And, it's totally free. Transwiz is designed to transfer and backup your

What's New In Transwiz?

Transwiz is an application designed to help you create a file that preserves all your user profile settings and configurations so that you can seamlessly transfer it to another computer. Comes with a wizard-like interface The setup is simple and straightforward, especially since it entails decompressing the archive. You should know that the application comes with a rugged and unpolished, yet intuitive interface that is designed as a wizard. The main window provides you with two main options, namely to transfer data to another computer or to migrate the user profile on the machine you are currently using. If you already created a user profile via the application, then you can just load it and have all your settings on the new computer in less than one minute. Allows you to create transfer scripts It is important to note that the program prompts you to set a password for the user profile files you are creating, particularly as it can contain sensitive information such as account credentials for instance. In addition to user profiles, the utility can also be employed to create backups with additional folder locations on the machine. Therefore, in case the data gets corrupted on your computer due to failure or virus infection, you can use the backups to immediately restore the settings and configurations of the user profiles associated with the domain or workstation. You should know that the app supports command line and you can use the Windows console to create transfer scripts that enable you to move multiple user profiles of a workstation that is included in a given domain. A useful tool for anyone working on multiple computers In the eventuality that you are working with dozens of applications that require time and energy to configure properly and you are working on several computers from different locations, then Transwiz can help you create a transferable user profile file that can get this task done without too much hassle.
