Captain Shutdown is a time management tool that allows you to schedule computer shutdowns at any time desired. It helps you save a lot of time when you're waiting for the PC to shut down automatically. Captain Shutdown does the job when it's asked to, you know when to shut down and don't even have to think about it anymore. Key features: - You can set the time and date for the shutdown - 5 daily shutdown sessions - Rules to be activated during the shutdown session - Set the order of the shutdown events - Open the program panel at the scheduled time - Indicate whether the shutdown should be in silent mode - Set a customizable shutdown message - Set a custom sound and play notification - Save a shutdown log for later use Audacity is an audio editor, mixer and recorder. It is freely available and open source software supporting a wide range of file formats. It is easy to learn and can be used by people with no previous knowledge of recording or editing audio. It's a multitrack editor which allows for precise control over multiple audio streams in multiple tracks. Audacity can decode and import most sound formats, including MP3 and OGG Vorbis. It has a powerful multi-track recorder, and it includes a high-quality waveform display, whose appearance can be modified, and tracks can be easily linked together to create new projects. You can use Audacity to record from input devices, such as CD players, microphones, and line inputs, and save them as WAV, MP3, OGG Vorbis, FLAC, AIFF, and many other formats. VLC is free and open source and can be used in many ways. It can be used as a multi-media player, an online video player, a terminal emulator, a DVD player, a slideshow generator, a voice recorder, an image viewer and a scriptable front-end to many other programs. VLC is based on libav, the library behind the decoding and streaming of multimedia on Linux. VLC builds upon the LGPL library FFmpeg and uses the same formats and container formats as FFmpeg. ApiPort.ini is a file used by the Windows API to alter certain system settings. It is useful for privacy-conscious administrators who wish to monitor or control security settings. It is also useful for administrators who are concerned about data security and the fact that malware can alter the settings
