

Fritz 14 [V2.0.0.0] For Mac Free Download References Category:Chess engines Category:Computer chess Category:Products introduced in 2002Q: how to parse the values from the html page using python I'm new to python and had a question: I want to create a web crawler and try to find some links related to a certain keyword, then I want to send a request to each site and see how the request is responded. I'm able to create a web crawler with python. The difficulty is how to find and extract the response from the HTML page. I'm not sure about how can I extract value of a link from the HTML page, for example main Page the above line is a link to the main page. I want to extract the value "index.htm" I will have the keywords for crawling and some pages that I will want to crawl, so I would like to know what's the pythonic way to do this. Sorry for the silly question, but I'm just a beginner. A: You can start with this page. // a.py //import scrapy import scrapy import re from scrapy.linkextractors import LinkExtractor from scrapy.spiders import CrawlSpider class MySpider(CrawlSpider): name = 'myspider' allowed_domains = ['example.com'] start_urls = [", ] def parse(self, response): for sel in response.xpath("//table/tr/th/text()"): link = response.urljoin(sel.extract()) yield scrapy.Request(link, callback=self.parse2) def parse2(self, response): print(response.url) body = response.body
