1. **Open a document in Photoshop.** The first thing to note about Photoshop is that it is a work tool, not a drawing or design program like Adobe Illustrator. Although you can create a watercolor portrait with Photoshop, it's for creating final images, not designing them. It's so powerful that I often limit its use to just one thing, such as an image of a person. 2. **Create a new document.** I frequently start a new document when I'm about to begin working on an image that will serve as a background. As with a piece of art, I start with a solid white canvas, often setting the background to 50 percent opacity, which allows the selected layers to blend into the background. In the following figure, you can see the "White" tab for the document properties.

Q: A way to get an array of all the values contained in a dataset What is the most efficient way to get a list of all the values contained in a dataset, across all the records? It could be a list of all the values of one column, or all the values in several columns, or a list of all the values of a certain index of all the columns? A: If you don't have an index and all the values are in a single column, you can find them with this: Dim AllValues As Variant AllValues = Range("A1:A100").Values If you don't have an index, you can use formulas to find the max, min, sum etc. Public Function Max(ByRef source As Range) As Double Application.Volatile source.FormulaArray = "=MAX(" & source.address(, xlR1C1) & ")" Max = source.Value End Function Public Function Min(ByRef source As Range) As Double Application.Volatile source.FormulaArray = "=MIN(" & source.address(, xlR1C1) & ")" Min = source.Value End Function Public Function Sum(ByRef source As Range) As Double Application.Volatile source.FormulaArray = "=SUM(" & source.address(, xlR1C1) & ")" Sum = source.Value End Function Public Function Count(ByRef source As Range) As Long Application.Volatile source.FormulaArray = "=COUNT(" & source.address(, xlR1C1) & ")" Count = source.Value End Function Q: Definition of  $\psi(x)$  I got stuck at the step where  $f(x) = \frac{\log\{1+x\}}{x}$  is differentiable and hence  $f'(x)$  exists.  $\lim_{x \rightarrow 0} \{f(x) - f(x-h)\} = hf'(x)$  for h small I'm not Inhibition of CFU-E, CFU-GM and CFU-GEMM by novel thiosemicarbazone analogues. A series of thiosemicarbazone analogues of interleukin-2 (IL-2) were prepared and their inhibitory effects on CFU-E, CFU-GM and CFU-GEMM growth were evaluated in vitro.

2-[(4-Amino-5-methylthiazole-2-yl)imino]acetate (BMT-1) and its 3-methyl derivative, 2-dimethylamino-3-[(4-amino-5-methylthiazole-2-yl)imino]acrylate (BMT-2) showed the most potent activity. The inhibitory effect of these compounds was also confirmed by the effects on colony numbers of IL-2-dependent cell lines. Compound 2-(3-amino-4-methylthiazole-2-yl)-N-phenylthiosemicarbazone (BMT-3) was also evaluated. Inhibitory effect of pentoxifylline on production of tumor necrosis factor- $\alpha$  and interleukin-6 in lipopolysaccharide-stimulated human monocytes. The effect of a methylxanthine derivative, pentoxifylline (PTX), on production of tumor necrosis factor-alpha (TNF-alpha) and interleukin-6 (IL-6) in human monocytes stimulated by LPS was investigated. The production of TNF-alpha in LPS-stimulated monocytes was considerably suppressed in the presence of PTX, and the suppressive effect of PTX was paralleled by that of a well-known protein kinase inhibitor, staurosporine, but not by PD98059, an inhibitor of extracellular signal-regulated kinase. The production of IL-6 in LPS-stimulated monocytes was considerably suppressed by treatment with PTX, but not by staurosporine. The suppression by PTX of LPS-induced TNF-alpha production was closely correlated with the kinetics of cyclic AMP accumulation in monocytes. These results suggest that PTX blocks LPS-induced TNF-alpha production through inhibition of cyclic AMP-dependent pathway. However, the extent of the suppression of LPS-induced IL-6
