1.You play as Gachi, you need to fight against Dominos in order to survive in this hot summer. 2. Watch out for the train, lock it's doors and kill off all Dominos with nunchucks & Umbrella. 3. Leave the train and try to make it to the supermarket, there's an army of Dominos waiting for you. 4. If you want to kill more quickly, you can just run towards them.]]>Content RatingsDKfrontierHead, by KhurramMustafa 27 May 2017 09:27:51 +0000 Head This is the author's head without skin. I want to take care of my head and make it look more in-world friendly. On the rendering, it seems like my skull is too big.I'm not asking for opinions. Just tell me if there is something wrong with it and point out the problems.Also, I tried to color the bits around the eyes, didn't really work so I came back to the drawing board. Engine]]>Content RatingsDKpolymario 14 May 2017 09:18:10 +0000 Polymario* You get to a harbor, you see a boat.You take a look at the boat, its called 'Polymario'.You enter the boat and insert random colorful content here - wait what is that.. a dude!Yes, this is a small project of mine. I've always had a liking for boats and in the modern age of video games and their overly-realistic visual's I just thought that a boat with some interesting interactions would be a cool thing to simulate. Behold, the Polymario. My Approach To This Project I was thinking of adding some kind of insert random game here or real-time simulator into this boat.Something like a physics engine or a steering component to the ships controls.Initially I thought that this would be too much since the boat isn't too high teller Because there is so much chance in the storyteller's life, it's helpful to compare storytelling with gambling. When you gamble, there's usually an uncertainty about how much you're going to get back. If things go wrong, you lose more than you expect. But when you tell a story, you have almost no expectation for what you'll get back. You risk nothing. You just put your ideas out there. Look at the Fabula picture - ideas build up and then when you remove the last story, the patch begins to collapse. My advice is to enjoy the joy of storytelling and don't worry about when the next story may fall. Let the stories fall as they must and soon you will be ready to tell the next one. Welcome to the Fabula Blog. This is a collection of thoughts, theories, musings and old photographs about the story-telling craft, the history of the word "Fabula" and John F. Kennedy's assassination. And look out for my book out early next year called THE TALE-TELLER 's GUIDE to BLOGGING. Posts Thursday, 6 January, 2010 HOW TO WRITE ANNOYING HARRY POTTER STUFF How to Write Annoying Harry Potter Stuff - So yesterday with a big box from Amazon, I pulled out a digital rewriter of the first book of the Harry Potter series. It might even have been the second book, but the editing certainly hadn't been great. It's amusing because it is a typographical archaeologist's dream and remains evidence of the dismal state of the printing industry of those days. I (and then Evie Price) have found many errors and typos, incomplete editions. We've been charting them all on a fabulous database called Full Barrow. There's also an invaluable parody called The Real Autographbook of an adult wizard which includes Full Barrow's founding member, Paul Magrs' Potterite. And check out this new song by the talented twins from San Antonio. Ignore the fact that the girls, Jenette and Jessica, are models. And ignore that the hair is equally as horrible as the writing. Ignore all that and enjoy the CANDY. How to Make Our Christmas Tree Like

You will be playing as an eighteen year old high school student who is living in his own utopia as an ignored, bullied person by many others throughout his life. You will witness how his life has changed from his childhood to his adult life. How people have changed, how they are better or worse than they were before. They all remain puppets in the direction of fate, the direction of the individual with only "dreams" and values. Morphine makes you empathize and make you witness to an alternative subconscious world from a different perspective. - Views the world in a manner of its own as one of the center of attention - The player needs to empathize and maintain the main character's view. - Complex operations to gain knowledge and manipulate things. - The player can choose to use the main character's view for convenience. - Morphine seeks to communicate psychology and the philosophy of human existence. - The player can set up the frame to manipulate the story. - There are certain expectations the game poses the player and the player needs to decide whether to keep the promise or not. - Every character is a human being. - Every character believes that he or she is "the Center of the World". - Every character needs time to express the feeling of loneliness and loves somebody or something. - Every character experiences change in his or her perspective. - Every character receives a tragic vision and God leaves, leaving nothing but illusions. - Every character is free to choose his or her own path, even no true decision. - Each character's behavior at times will fluctuate. - Every character is a human being. - Every character believes that he or she is "the Center of the World". - Every character needs time to express the feeling of loneliness and loves somebody or something. - Every character experiences change in his or her perspective. - Every character receives a tragic vision and God leaves, leaving nothing but illusions. - Every character is free to choose his or her own path, even no true decision. - Each character's behavior at times will fluctuate. - Every character is a human being. - Every character believes that he or she is "the Center of the World". - Every character needs time to express the feeling of loneliness and loves somebody or something. - Every character experiences change in his or her perspective. - Every character receives a tragic vision and God leaves, leaving
