What's new in My House:

Need Help? Sunday, November 27, 2007 Today I'll be hosting the multi-party Tournament mode which is just unique in every sense as it features a scripted invited party of up to 6 people so we will have an organisation to tell people from the viewer where to go. This year you can build a training centre or academy/institute and have your own team of invited players so choose your favourite tennis ball machine (even a sand table tennis), the pace you play is team based which means the time wait for each shot is scaled to make for a perfect match. If you want the simulation to be unscripted you can also select a for a friend version which allows you to watch a live match yourself (through your console) if they beat your computer opponent you can beat them again from your game report. I'm currently working on implementing this feature and will hopefully have it soon. You can also choose between classic or power swing driving as in the original tournament mode. Part of the tennis server script has also been adapted to make an auto-toss feature if the server determines the player needs a toss. This matches the behaviour of 2003 - at times we had to toss, other times we didn't. Toss means the player who is being served has to move before the server can pitch the ball to the player who plays the return. I've also added a suggestion in which you can suggest to the server that the other player is receiving a wrong service or that you are the receiving player. This feature is based on the IP/LAN chat feature. When that is enabled I've also allowed players to start the match with a chat line in place. Now it's just the implementation to finish to my satisfaction. To relax you can take your mind off tennis and can many random actions such as an oil rig drilling, clay wall crack building, nuclear engineering, fast food franchise and just help around the driving school (deployed platoons for back-up) that you can build. This also means that you don't have to put your friends through a horrible death of getting robbed on the way to a match of dying in a traffic accident as they cross the region limit. You have the option to choose between single player, multi player in split screen and up to 4 players in co-operative multiplayer but you only play as a single player by single player on the server. The editor has also be updated to draw all the maps
