The fate of shrubland in a landscape including pine forests and a cropland mosaic. The conservation of shrublands is particularly important in Mediterranean Europe where their existing management often includes agricultural areas (e.g. croplands or fallow land). In this study, we evaluated the relative importance of the role played by natural factors (climate and fire) and anthropogenic factors (management) in the persistence of shrublands located in a Mediterranean cropland mosaic. In order to address this issue, we used a combination of line- and matrix-plot models. The results of the models showed that in this cropland mosaic, a desert-type climate and agricultural practices are the main factors preventing the persistence of shrublands. In particular, the adoption of a moderate grazing-stepping management is the most effective strategy to control shrub growth and thus to preserve shrublands. This method leads to both desert-like conditions in the shrublands and to a spatially continuous distribution of the relative importance of the various factors influencing shrublands' persistence. In this way, it ensures the continuity of the overall habitat in the landscape. The application of this technique can therefore be regarded as a key to sustainability in shrublands management in the Mediterranean region.

Q: Sorting a set of IP Addresses using Collections.sort() I'm a Java beginner and have been dealing with sorting IP Addresses for my assignment. In my application, I've stored a set of IP Addresses in a Collection object. What I've been trying to do is sort this set in ascending order using a custom Comparator. The only code I have written so far is as follows: Col
