(Photo via Wikipedia) It's wellknown that many 16,000-year-old cave paintings were created by Neanderthals. But most of the ancient artworks were discovered on open ground. A team led by archaeologists at Brown University has found new insights into the way the ancient people of the faraway mountains of central France developed an art style. As many as 70 percent of the cave paintings known so far were discovered in such open spaces, says Nathan Sauer, an associate professor at Brown, and the study's lead author. The vast majority of this art was created between 7,000 and 16,000 years ago — roughly the same time period as the Artiodactyla hunting and gathering period that archaeologists have determined lasted in Europe. The work, published online on Dec. 2 in the journal Nature, identifies "a huge burst

We'll see your favourite celebrities strutting their stuff in various kinds of bikinis, bras and thongs on sale, and of course, whatever might spill out of those prams, while Belinda manages to look utterly fabulous through every scene. We will see the new unisex body that has made bras virtually obsolete for almost every woman and clothing for men become marginally more fashionable, at least for the ladies. And while we're at it, we'll also look at the bright future of fashion, yes, you are already wearing it, and explain how the past will be re-created in the future, here and now.Q: Are there any "natural disasters" that do not result in casualties? As we know, disasters are categorised by intensity, or level of casualties. But what about other categories of disaster? Are there any disasters that do not result in casualties? A: Yes. Anything that was never recorded: In the French island of Reunion, the 2010 outbreak of chikungunya virus resulted in an epidemic of acute fever accompanied by arthralgia. Among 316 patients studied, 15% had an abnormal pattern of movement, 3.5% had nausea and/or vomiting, and 2.1% had headache. Chikungunya is a highly contagious disease caused by chikungunya virus, a member of the Togaviridae family of positive-sense RNA viruses; infection of Aedes spp. mosquitoes is responsible for its transmission. The first documented epidemic in Reunion Island began during the holidays in mid-December 2009. A virologist
