U.S. District Judge Gershwin A. Drain ruled in a brief order Thursday that his court doesn't have jurisdiction over the case. In a one-page court filing, Drain said he won't grant an injunction pending litigation, even though attorneys for the plaintiff James Falck did not request one. Falck says he was a Michigan resident for five years before moving to Alabama in 2015. He was detained and accused of lying to border agents about a tear in his pants and a bottle of urine that he says he was carrying as part of his urine therapy program. He has spent more than a year in immigration detention. Drain's ruling follows a request by U.S. Justice Department lawyers to dismiss the case, arguing that he doesn't have the authority to issue a stop-the-presses injunction while it proceeds. They said it would be "premature and inappropriate" to do so. Falck, of Livonia, Michigan, and his attorney, A
