
The Council - Episode 4: Burning Bridges Hacked

The Council by Steel Crate Games is a fantasy, stealth, RPG and strategy game set on an island where members of the Consortium have gathered to rediscover the lost secrets of the past. Each of the Consortium players takes on a role such as the Lord, the Priest, or the Banker. There are 3 main characters to select from: the red-eyed duke, the nihilist poet, and the self-proclaimed prince of darkness. Play as one of the 5 playable characters to uncover clues and fight your way through rival players as you seek the truth about the lost secrets of Mortimer's Island. Each Consortium member has their own agenda and the power to change the game permanently as well as leave lingering memories and consequences for the other members. The world of The Council is a rich and fully realized open-world fantasy world where there are no limits to your abilities or potential outcomes.

The decisions you make will ripple out to affect the players and how the story plays out. Your words, your weapons, and your decisions will determine who lives and who dies in the island of Mortimer's Island, and your legacy here will be a mystery for the ages.

For ages, The Council has been a rumor, a tale that was whispered to one who wanted to become a guardian of the mystic. However, this legend no longer holds true as one man comes to find what he is looking for: his mother. Louis de Richet, aged 17, journeys to an island on a quest to finally know what happened to his mother. The island is a living, breathing thing, yet still abandoned by most of its inhabitants, leaving Louis all alone, save for those he meets along his journey. He must navigate his way through unknown lands, capture animals to keep himself alive, and search for clues in order to find out more about his mother. This experience is unlike any that he has ever had. However, what he discovers is greater than he could ever have imagined, and he will need to act quickly before it is too late. The island is thick with secrets and lies, and while Louis has brought knowledge, he is also pushed to the brink of insanity. What's new in The Council - Episode 4: Burning Bridges:

How do you deal with a character that's both your best friend and a complete and utter ass? With a little bit of wit and a whole lot of attitude, of course. Carrie thinks she's hot shit for scoring a ride on an Ash's trail bike - with zero scruples. But when Officer Adam confronts her, Carrie's true colours start to show. With one of Ash's boys now big in jail, Ash turns to Sam and tries to figure out who the mystery pervy criminal is. But to his horror, in walks his own father, who is riding up to the cabin to crack down on Sam's his latest stomping grounds. Ash wonders how the hell he's going to save this situation when Sam's father arrives with his ex-wife and knee-deep in legal troubles of his own. And then, Jake's house gets scoured by the cops, forcing Sam and Ash to scatter. Desperate to keep their money - and keep their operation safe - the boys turn to Carrie and set in motion the chaotic chain of events that will end in tragedy - and a whole lot of heartbreakingly awesome comedy and tragedy. When I first sat down to write this week's episode I didn't intend to cast too many people - or do too many characters. However, when we got the first audition, we found ourselves with enough talented men to do the whole crew. So, as I continue writing and shooting this episode, it remains to be seen exactly how I can fit everybody I want to in. But I am happy that I did my research and put forward as many men as I could. All in all, it was an incredible cast - we've got a very experienced, multi-talented group. Right from the auditioning process, I knew that we'd get another legendary cast member in the company of our mischievous young crew. The great Chris Macosko is set to become an Ash friend for life. And as an actor, he is a true friend. He's always been there for me since we first met at the National Theatre in London and he's always been extremely supportive of both SAG and Gen Art in general. As it turns out, he was part of the original cast of A View From Balmain and is one of the most talented and experienced actors we have around here. Another outstanding actor, Chris Allnutt, will be joining us for this
