Brushes allow you to quickly apply a specific type of effect. For example, the liquify tool allows you to quickly smooth or manipulate the appearance of an image. Below is my routing configuration public static void Register(HttpConfiguration config) { config.MapHttpAttributeRoutes(); config.Routes.MapHttpRoute(name: "DefaultApi", routeTemplate: "api/{controller}/{id}", defaults: new { id = RouteParameter.Optional }); } And here is my method that is trying to get called. public IEnumerable GetContacts(int? id) { List contacts = Contact.allContacts; var filtered = contacts.Where(x => x.Id == id); return filtered; } While this works fine with MVC, I am not able to get a hit with my Web API routes. It always returns the default 404 error. When I am looking in the Network tab of Developer Tools in Chrome, I see the following hit. So my issue is, how do I get my Web API routing to get a hit? A: Make sure the controller name is api in your route. public static void Register(HttpConfiguration config) { config.MapHttpAttributeRoutes(); config.Routes.MapHttpRoute(name: "DefaultApi", routeTemplate: "api/{controller}", defaults: new { id = RouteParameter.Optional }); } 3-way DVR + Cloud DVR Using the RedNetCloud DVR platform, you can enjoy the flexibility of the
