In a solitary city, there lived a young boy who loved drawing and loved his friends. One day, he found the rest of the world. In this new city, he found that he was stopped by a strong woman, but he eventually befriends her. There was no place he could call home, but he had no thoughts of leaving. In the days to come, he met new friends and gathered together an underground guild of fighters. Players use his ability to draw and fight monsters, but the guild's members are also calling to help this boy. A tale of the new city is told! Skeptophilia (skep-to-fil-i-a) (n.) - the love of logical thought, skepticism, and thinking critically. Being an exploration of the applications of skeptical thinking to the world at large, with periodic excursions into linguistics, music, politics, cryptozoology, and why people keep seeing the face of Jesus on grilled cheese sandwiches. Your favorite channel's CHANNEL BREAKERS (and some you haven't heard of before)... This past month has seen me trying to get my bros to pick up a cat, which resulted in falling asleep in his home only to be awoken by him sounding like a battle-beasted BANG! on my ribs while fondling my face and eliciting my snarky response that I wasn't listening to a ringing phone. (He did apologize for intruding on my sleep, though.) Which can only mean one thing: the hour of bickering and cat-befriending is here! So let's do that! I'm going to pick out some of my favorite videos from the past month in particular or in general, and I'd like you to chime in with your favorite videos or content of the past few months, and send them to jimsmyth at gmail dot com for me to use for future postings. My choice is entirely yours to demur or dissent! Several months ago, a major paper described how the human brain evolved to pay less attention to problem-solving things that don't really matter to us, and actually focus what's necessary. The first half of the Brain for Success series seems to be a blatant case of the sample selection effect in action, as

What's new:

Go Home, Mr. Fisk! is a Canadian children's television series which aired on CBC Television from September 1984 to November 1985. An animated adaptation of A Tale of Two Cities written by Paul Mazursky and directed by John Kuntz and Nick Raphael, the series featured the voices of actor Colin Fox, Martha Byrne, Tom Smothers, Billie Whitelaw and Arlene Duncan. History CBC and Mazursky prepared a pilot episode of the series, broadcast as an experimental show on CBC Television (CBE) on September 20, 1984. It is based on the novella Les Deux Cantons by Mazursky and John Kasey. An adaptation of A Tale of Two Cities broadcast May 1, 1985, was the first episode of the first season, which ran for 13 episodes. Among the writers for the new series was the Henson Creature Shop producer Richard E. Peterson. Peterson had already created a character puppet for the Henson Company with David Morley called a biftig for The Hobbit which opened the door for him to be hired by CBC for a show, placed him in charge of the animation on the show, in-betweening and the style of the show, and he produced several other shows with the Henson group including The Elephant Show, which was built on a similar concept to Go Home, Mr. Fisk!. Immediately after the pilot episode of Go Home, Mr. Fisk! aired, Peterson was hired by the Henson Company. A Tale of Two Cities was the last animated series he created for Henson before he joined the staff at the company, although he continued working with other puppets, his first show before he joined the staff was It's Just Another Day at the Office (1978) an animated series made by Henson and Jim Henson Productions. Another Henson Co. creation that appeared with the Henson puppets after Peterson worked for them was Freedom to Learn (1986), followed by the Christmas specials A Muppets Christmas: Letters to Santa (1987). Both The Hobbit and Pyramids have a similarly open, innocent style. Peterson worked at Henson during the period where the typical Henson production had a lot of designs, while Go Home, Mr. F
