The game consists of these: In a list of points, all connected points are numbered 1 through n. The idea is to pick a point (pick point from the list) and increase that point's number (add 1) by one. When that point is a 1, then increase the number of the point immediately in front of the point you're not currently playing on (increment their number by one). Continue this until a path of 1s is created (the 1s should be in a continuous line). The point you end at is your destination. If the list is empty (no points are started), you

How to use { } in a function in Flow

language, a linter?

I've found a function

on Github used in

Flow, and I am

unfamiliar with how to use it. I understand how to pass a variable inside {}, but I am confused about how to pass a function inside of {}. In PHP, the function may be written as:

public function foo() { //some code } In JS, it may be written as:

function foo() {} How to make a similar
syntax in the Flow
language? A: For
flow, functions can use any of the
common syntax in it.
function foo() {}
foo.fn function(a:
string) {} The
function body can't be a block, though.

The interpreter is currently working on allowing blocks for functions, but there is no implement

I'm doing exercises for different data types and I can't find my answer for this one. Whenever I try to run this function in python, this error returns: TypeError: test_function() takes exactly 2 arguments (1 given) The data I'm using is "414". def test_function(a,b): return a+b How do I fix that? A: You don't need to pass parameters if you do not want to use them.

You just need to remove the parameter when calling the function.

test_function("414") This would return 415. A: You probably want this: def test_function(a, b): return a + b test_function("414", "6") Meaning you do not give the parameters to the function, but use them as you want.
