Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus for producing a semiconductor device, and more particularly to the apparatus for producing the semiconductor device including a post-process device for inspecting the conductivity of the semiconductor device. 2. Description of the Related Art Generally, in the semiconductor device manufacturing process, various types of semiconductor devices are produced through various steps such as a step of depositing, an etching, a diffusion and the like. In order to inspect the conductivity of the semiconductor device produced through these steps, there are provided a conductivity inspection apparatus for inspecting the conductivity of the semiconductor device. The conductivity inspection apparatus includes an inspection portion for inspecting the conductivity of the semiconductor device, and a conveyor for conveying the semiconductor device. When the semiconductor device is tested by the inspection apparatus, the semiconductor device is conveyed by the conveyor to the inspection portion and stopped. In the inspection portion, a probe is applied to a surface of the semiconductor device to send a voltage to the semiconductor device. If the semiconductor device is normally (under normal conditions) in this operation, then the inspection apparatus sends the voltage signal from the probe to a collector of a checker. The checker checks whether or not the voltage signal is the voltage of correct values. If the semiconductor device is not under normal conditions, the probe is moved away from the semiconductor device. For this reason, the semiconductor device is stopped. In addition, the inspection apparatus continues to check the semiconductor device every time the semiconductor device is stopped. After the checker is finished its work, the semiconductor device is conveyed to a next step of the semiconductor device manufacturing process. However, there is
