Q: Oracle column definition in select not visible in report I have a query that is making use of a ORA-04006: column not allowed here clause. However, my code is failing only in the second case, and my report is failing to display the column even though it appears in the code. Why is this? My query is simple: select column1, column2, column3 from my_table where case when column4 = 'foo' then column4 = 'bar' else column4 = 'baz' end; This example fails because column4 is null when column4 = 'foo' and column4 is not null when column4 = 'bar'. However, if I try adding a simple alias to the table and changing column4 to 'foo' to make the syntax work: select column1, column2, column3 from my_table where case when column4 = 'foo' then column4 = 'bar' else column4 = 'baz' end; or select column1, column2, column3 from my_table where case when column4 = 'foo' then column4 = 'bar' else column4 = 'baz' end; then it fails because the column in the condition does not exist in the resulting table. Now I create a new table based on my_table, but
