It was mapped by the United States Geological Survey from surveys and U.S. Navy air photos, 1960–64, and was named by the Advisory Committee on Antarctic Names for Edmund M. Mink, U.S. Chief Scientist at McMurdo Station, 1965. See also List of glaciers in the Antarctic Maps Vinson Massif. Scale 1:250 000 topographic map. Reston, Virginia: US Geological Survey, 1988. The recent finding that statins protect against ischemic heart disease independently of the low-density lipoprotein-cholesterol level raises questions about the optimal use of statins in high-risk vascular disease. We reviewed the scientific evidence on the effects of statins in vascular disease and identified studies in patients with carotid atherosclerosis, PAD, cerebrovascular disease, renal artery stenosis, and abdominal aortic aneurysms. The only randomized, placebo-controlled trial of statins in PAD showed that patients with intermittent claudication had a 32% relative risk reduction for the combination of ischemic end points (death, nonfatal myocardial infarction, and nonfatal ischemic stroke). Studies in carotid atherosclerosis, cerebrovascular disease, renal artery stenosis, and abdominal aortic aneurysms are in preliminary stages; information is unavailable for the less common

The passage of the US Federal Primary Pregnancy Care Improvement Act of 2009 (PPCI Act) marked a major milestone in the development of safe and effective approaches to promoting maternal, infant, and family well-being. To estimate the impact of the PPCI Act on the risk of experiencing an unplanned pregnancy among pregnant women who seek care in US abortion clinics from January 1, 1992, to December 31, 2010. We used data from the National Survey of Family Growth and Abortion Surveillance to create a sample of abortions performed in US abortion clinics in 1992-2010. Using a difference-in-differences approach, we compared changes in the proportion of abortions that were unplanned between treatment and control groups from 1992 to 2010. The difference-in-differences approach, with the treatment group experiencing treatment and the control group experiencing no policy change, was selected for the estimation process, which yielded percentage point change differences for unplanned abortions. The main outcome was a difference-in-differences estimate of an unplanned pregnancy compared with a planned pregnancy after PPCI. During the 10-year study period, 36.0% of abortions were unplanned, with the proportion among women entering treatment clinics in 1992 declining to 29.0% by 2010 and among women entering control clinics increasing to 41.0% by 2010. Our results indicate that implementation of the PPCI Act reduced the percentage of unplanned abortions among women receiving care at US abortion clinics from 1992 to 2010. In light of the high proportion of unplanned pregnancies and the low rate of successful pregnancy planning, continued efforts are needed to expand access to pregnancy care services, including family planning services, to prevent unplanned pregnancies.Q: What to use for leading and trailing prices in an ebay store?
