Q: Setting the upper bound of an array by defining the lower bound in C# I'm creating a program to add two sets of values, I want to define the upper bound of the array to start from 0, as a lower bound and as an upper bound. I'm having trouble doing this and I can't seem to find any info about it online. I found this solution online, but it's in VB.NET and I'm not sure if this would work with C#, below is the code it is using: `Dim i As Integer = -1 Dim min As Integer = val.Item(0) Dim max As Integer = val.Item(0) For i = 1 To max If val.Item(i) > val.Item(i - 1) Then max = i Next` I want to do something similar, but in C#. A: It's a constant array in C#, you can't re-size it like that. You can use var instead of array - like this: `var a = new int[2]{1,2}; // returns [1, 2] or, more readable: var a = new int[] { 1, 2 }; // returns [1, 2]` You can initialize it with a Range() method, that will provide an upper and a lower bound - like this: `var a = Enumerable.Range(1, 2).ToArray(); // returns [1, 2]` Or, more readable: `var a = Enumerable.Range(1, 2); // returns [1, 2]` Another way is to use some List `var a = new List { 1, 2 }; // returns [1, 2]` Q: How to fix error in app engine module? I'm trying to create a new app engine app module and I'm getting an error when trying to deploy a new version. Here's the error: Process exited with code 1. Here is my `/tmp/sdk_gae_modules-1/modules.json: { "name": "myapp-generic-module", "version": "v0.0.1", "description": "A generic app module", "title": "myapp", "auth`

What's New In?

Tag: nbc I always love to hear from my readers! So as I have a few birthdays looming before me I thought I'd start with one that is next week. On Saturday I will be turning 23 and I will be starting my third year working at my current job (2013 was the first year I worked for my current company and 2016 was my second). So I thought I'd pop over to my website (which you can see here) and dedicate a post to all my readers who are currently reading what I write. So I first want to thank my readers for supporting me in what has turned into a very productive year for me! The challenge of working full time, going to graduate school and parenting our sweet boy, has been a lot of work but a lot of fun. Last year I wrote so many of you and this year I am really looking forward to hearing from you as it will be almost the anniversary of my 3rd Blogiversary! ? So this month I have decided to do an "About Me" post to share more about what I am working on now as well as what I have learned throughout the years. Below I will share a picture of me when I was just a baby and will follow up with a write up about the year that I turned 20! We welcome you to join us today by reading more about my love of vintage! I hope you enjoy my little slideshow! xoxo, VanessaLung Cancer PET Radiopharmaceuticals. Although positron emission tomography (PET) is currently used in the clinical management of many lung cancers, few functional PET-radiopharmaceuticals are available for lung cancer detection. Indium-111-diethylenetriaminepentaacetic acid (DTPA) and Ga-67-labeled amino acids are currently available for the diagnostic evaluation of lung cancer, but their performance has not been systematically compared. A review of these radiopharmaceuticals was carried out to determine the value of these agents in the diagnostic workup of patients with known or suspected lung cancer. Current knowledge regarding the clinical implementation of the various PET-radiopharmaceuticals is reviewed as well. The preferred radiopharmaceuticals were compared, and on the basis of the currently available evidence, the use of PET for the evaluation of lung cancer is recommended for the following indications: a) evaluation of patients with known or suspected lung cancer and a negative conventional test
