English translation of the book was first published in 1981 by Pen World Press in New York as Galaxy Arena. The book is also reedited by Noveyuscev himself under the title "Galaxy Arena" with a prologue by Gul cited as being written in 1978 at a time when "Popular Mechanics" was urging Gul to stop writing. The book is part of the so-called "lost science fiction culture" of the 1960s. The League of Nations (Russia, the USA, the UK, Germany, France, the USSR and China) and the Universe Organisation cut out parts of the planet to provide for the testing of their war machines. The book also provides descriptions of the technology and equipment used at the time of its writing: Trivia Because of the relative moderation in this novel, Roman Gul was one of the last authors whom the Federation of Science Fiction Writers of Russia (FSFFR) blacklisted.
