ATHENS, Greece (AP) □ Greece and European leaders agreed Tuesday that debt relief should be put off until the second half of the year, a decision likely to make it harder for Prime Minister George Papandreou to hold a national referendum on whether to accept a deal with

wrapped up by Sept. 23, when the European Union's leaders are meeting in Brussels to discuss Greece's requirements for more aid, which Greece says is critical to staving off bankruptcy. That was the date proposed at the Nov. 26-27 summit in Brussels, and it was agreed to at a meeting of creditors last week in Berlin. However, the deal should be ready by then only if the creditors have been able to settle on a common debt relief path, said Ioannis Mouzalas, a government official involved in the talks. "We need to have the final goal, and that is around Sept. 23," Mouzalas told The Associated Press. He said progress toward that goal is expected soon, especially given that it has already been determined that new spending cuts by Greek lawmakers will not be required as of Monday. In Athens, where anger at foreign creditors has been rising as the effect of austerity measures on people's daily lives has become more clear, the vote on the creditors' agreement could not come at a worse time. Papandreou needs a national referendum to win approval for the pact with the eurozone and International Monetary Fund, which his government is pushing. He would need it to pass, not only in a referendum in which voter turnout would likely be weak, but also in the parliamentary vote on the bill that will set up the new debt deal with the creditors. Prime Minister George Papandreou has said the Oct. 5 parliamentary vote will be postponed as long as the government needs, so that the vote on the Greek Parliament of the European People's Party and Social Democrats governing coalition is held later in the day on Oct. 6, and the rest of the vote is held on Oct. 19 and 20.

This would give the prime minister more time to negotiate a deal with the creditors, preferably before Nov

Cross-reactivity of tyrosine- and tryptophan-containing peptides to anti-angiotensin II (anti-AT II) autoantibodies in patients with autoimmune angioedema. We studied, by radioimmunoassay using AT II-coupled Sepharose 4B, the presence of circulating AT II autoantibodies in a group of patients with angioedema and documented urticaria pigmentosa or both; 31 of 42 (74%) patients had AT II autoantibodies. Of the 31 patients, 11 (36%) were classified as having type I (swollen skin in addition to angioedema) or type II (angioedema only) autoimmune angioedema. There was a significant difference in the prevalence of AT II autoantibodies among the two groups (P less than 0.01). The highest prevalence in both patient groups was found among the patients with milder allergic or autoallergic reactions. In seven patients the antibody titer was found to be high (greater than or equal to

1:2000), but remained unchanged upon long-term treatment with prednisone. This suggests that AT II autoantibodies may be present in patients with allergic or autoallergic cutaneous reactions, whereas those circulating as a response to angioedema appear to be of a different nature. A survey of 55 normal subjects revealed that
