Pangman is a virtual reality game in which you alternate between using guns and hooks to destroy moving spheres of different sizes. The story mode is the most entertaining: you play in a space arcade simulation where you have to protect the game entrance with loads of bombs. Other than that, you can play in the arena mode, which randomly shows up enemies in various locations and you can only shoot them. Lydia's Five Layers Lydia loves many things and has a variety of interests. Five years ago she published her first book, and it gained her fame. This tiny little phrase started off as a clever nickname for the chip-music genre I made (as I called it Chip-step). I later switched to Short Chip, and then short chiptune. These are all variations of the tiny phrase, (And that got a little corny) so I changed the name to include the fact that my music isn't actually in step, and is pretty short. Now for the real history: -- Original Chipmusic name: You'll have to excuse me while I really stretch the term "chip music" into a small little phrase.

A Reunion at Devon, UK in 2011 For many of the families attending Rear-Admiral J.H. Arrancourt (i.e. "JAR") CVO PC was nothing short of a "Once in a Lifetime event". JAR led a planeload of shipmates who had served with him during the Phoney War days of WW2. Many that attended the reunion had not seen their shipmates for years. Reunion Below this past summer's reunion are some of the shipmates, representing the surviving ship's personnel from the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve (RNVR) HMS Jervis Bay. Captain Norman H. Ratcliffe RN (Commanding Officer, RNVR HMS Jervis Bay) and Sub-Lieutenant Eric K. Newton RN (only son of Mr & Mrs Newton formerly of Auckland, New Zealand) take the first (foreground) two photographs below with JAR. Eric Newton. Captain Norman H. Ratcliffe. L-R: Commander R.A.S. Greenwood RN, Captain G.H. Wilson, Sub-Lieutenant M.R. Wilson, Sub-Lieutenant N.D. Murray RN, Sub-Lieutenant E.E. Smith, and Sub-Lieutenant E. C. Goodfellow RN. Colour Sergeant Edgar James Newton RN (much younger son of Mr & Mrs Newton) was also there and may have been with them. Lord Beaverbrook plays his part in the 1940-1941 Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve (RNVR) HMS Jervis Bay Below these (righthand) two photographs is a group of perhaps fifteen of JAR's shipmates on duty during WW2. Among them: William Jervis Andrew Jervis Allied Professionals of the Royal Navy Leopard 1 At the rear centre of this photograph can be seen the Battleship BRITISH LEOPARD, acquired in April 1941 and deployed as a 'tall ship' escort to Atlantic and Arctic convoys and the Home Fleet. She was sunk by U-Boat 31.10.42 after 12 weeks convoy escort service although the submarine was damaged by depth charges. Two further photographs below are taken at the reunion. Welcome To. Chichester 0 is a visual novel based on the original Ren'py PC version. It follows its own story, while still not being a direct remake. Graphics: The visual novel is a mix between 2D gameplay and 3D environments. The main character, Chichester, goes on a (adventurous) journey through a city called Chichester, and comes across various people and environments. The world is depicted through atmospheric art. It's not a full on 3D game, but the world feels more real and less fake-ish. The character models feel less stylised and more 'sexy'. Even though the visual novel is fairly simple, the visuals are pretty good. The character models are easily recognisable. The game uses 2D environments (such as Chichester's flat), while also having 3D elements. This leads to certain areas feeling less strange. Audio: Both audio and background music play a large part in the game's overall atmosphere. You'll hear different types of music throughout the game. Music takes on more of a role as the game goes on and atmosphere becomes more important. The background music is upbeat. It's fitting since it's a visual novel based in a city. Voice Acting: Chichester has over 20 voice lines. You'll hear different types of voices throughout the game. The voice acting is pretty good. It's not too intense and it fits the game's tone. Storyline: The game's story takes place in a city called Chichester. It's a British city that's pretty well known for having other weird things. The protagonist, Chichester, is having his house redecorated. Chichester lives alone at his current address. Soon after, a mysterious girl named Meteora appears. She invites Chichester on a trip to an island she thinks he might like. Meteora is a hostess at a seedy bar she owns called Peak End Cafe. She has no time for people she doesn't like. Chichester is rather interested in the island, in spite of his reluctance. The island is called Yellow Springs and Chichester begins his trip there. While on Yellow Springs, Chichester
