The Best Turkey Leftovers: How to Cook Them Fast, Healthy, and Deliciously! Turkey, turkey! It's the most wonderful time of the year. It's Thanksgiving. But, this is not just any old turkey. There's no room for anything but the best of the best—the Turkey of Turkeydom! And it's this goal that I am about to share with you. For years, the very best of the best Turkey is reserved only for the gluttonous, and rare turkey remains are consumed mostly by folks whose families can afford to eat real turkey all the time. If we are honest with ourselves, we know that the majority of American families simply can't come close to entertaining a family holiday meal with real turkey day in and day out, so it's no wonder that we are left to twist our very own arms and make up our minds between so many other processed foods and "meats" that we can buy at our local grocery store. I am here to let you in on a little secret—the best Turkey you will ever taste does not need to come from a store or an expensive restaurant. In fact, it can come from your own kitchen. This is true! I am going to demonstrate how you can use your typical Thanksgiving leftovers to make it happen. Here's the proof! Bitcoins aren't very useful for sending money to other people directly. People have to use third-party apps or websites to send bitcoins and then they use their credit cards or debit cards or bank accounts to pay for the service. With that problem in mind, certain startups have come up with solutions. The most popular one is BitRefill, a service that makes sending bitcoin really, really easy. The website is a bit, how do I say, simple. You start by filling out a form with the amount of bitcoins you want to send.
